1. Executive Summary

Pakistan is home of the largest youth populations in the world, with approximately 33.46% of its citizens aged between 16 and 24 years (Pakistan Bureau of Statistics, 2019–20). This demographic profile offers a unique opportunity for economic growth, provided that the youth are equipped with relevant, market-driven skills. In recent years, rapid technological advancement and industrial transformation have fundamentally altered the global labor landscape, increasing demand for a technically skilled, adaptable, and forward-looking workforce. In this context, it is essential for Pakistan to invest strategically in human capital development to ensure its youth can actively contribute to national progress and global competitiveness.

To address this need, the Government of Sindh launched the Benazir Bhutto Shaheed Youth Development Program (BBSYDP) in 2008, with the objective of empowering young individuals through vocational training and skill development. As part of a legislative initiative to institutionalize these efforts, the program was transitioned into the Benazir Bhutto Shaheed Human Resource Research and Development Board (BBSHRRDB) under the Sindh Assembly Act of 2013. BBSHRRDB was established as a statutory body to enhance the province's human resource base by providing employable skill sets to young people, thereby increasing their chances of meaningful employment and active economic participation.

This third-party validation study was conducted under the Livestock Wing of the Livestock & Fisheries Department, Government of Sindh, with the Project Management Unit (PMU) based in Hyderabad. The livestock sector plays a vital role in the provincial and national economy, currently contributing more to GDP than the combined output of all major crops. The Livestock & Fisheries Department is committed to sustainable sectoral development through policy reforms, targeted investments, and the promotion of public-private partnerships. These efforts aim to improve food security, reduce poverty, generate employment, foster rural development, and boost export potential.

The evaluation encompassed data collection from over 1,500 participants enrolled in diverse training programs across various components. The findings demonstrate that the initiative has been instrumental in reaching disadvantaged and underserved youth, offering them the opportunity to acquire practical, in-demand skills. Field visits confirmed the presence and participation of all verified students, with no instances of fraudulent entries reported. Furthermore, stipends and training funds were disbursed in accordance with established procedures, ensuring transparency and accountability throughout the implementation process.

Participant feedback across training centers was overwhelmingly positive. More than 90% of trainees affirmed that the selection process, instructor quality, and overall training delivery were fair, transparent, and effective. Many students regarded the training as a pivotal factor in shaping their academic and professional futures. The programme has thus proven to be a significant enabler of youth empowerment, contributing meaningfully to human resource development, economic resilience, and social inclusion in Sindh.

2. Introduction

Employment is a broad and evolving concept that encompasses both formal and informal sectors, each contributing to the economic and social fabric of society. In today's dynamic labor market, employment is no longer characterized by lifetime job security in a single occupation or organization. Instead, the modern workforce is increasingly mobile, with individuals expected to adapt to shifting demands, change careers multiple times, and continuously update their skills in response to rapid technological advancements and changing industry needs.

In this context, Benazir Bhutto Shaheed Human Resource Research & Development Board plays a vital role in enhancing employability, supporting economic development, and promoting social inclusion. BBSHRRDB not only provides individuals with specific technical competencies but also equips them with transferable skills that are applicable across a range of occupations. It enables vertical and horizontal mobility within the labor market by offering a diverse skill set and ensuring opportunities for continuous professional development. Furthermore, in recognition of the importance of entrepreneurial capacity in job creation and economic self-sufficiency, many BBSHRDB curricula now integrate entrepreneurship training to encourage self-employment and innovation, particularly among youth.

Recognizing these national labor trends, the Livestock Department under the Government of Sindh launched a targeted youth skill development initiative to strengthen human capital and improve employment outcomes. This initiative was undertaken with the support and collaboration of the Benazir Bhutto Shaheed Human Resource Research and Development Board (BBSHRDB) a statutory body committed to enhancing the skills and employability of youth of Sindh through structured vocational training programs.

As part of this project, a comprehensive training program was implemented across the province, focusing on practical and job-oriented skills related to the livestock sector. A total of 1,444 youth trainees successfully graduated from various courses under this initiative, each of whom received structured instruction and hands-on experience designed to align with labor market needs. The program aimed not only to enhance individual employment prospects but also to contribute to broader goals such as rural development, food security, and economic diversification within Sindh.

This report presents a detailed analysis of the training programme, including its design, implementation, effectiveness, and outcomes. It also provides insights into the feedback collected from beneficiaries and highlights key findings regarding the program's impact on youth employability and livelihood enhancement in the livestock sector.

2.1 Objectives of the Assignment:

The primary objective of this assignment is to conduct a comprehensive third-party validation of the youth skill development training programme implemented under the auspices of the Benazir Bhutto Shaheed Human Resource Research and Development Board (BBSHRDB) in collaboration with the Livestock Department, Government of Sindh. The validation process is designed to ensure that all aspects of the training — ranging from instructor quality to employment outcomes — adhere to the standards and expectations outlined in the project's framework.

The specific objectives of the assignment are outlined below:

S.	Objective	Detail Description
1	Validation of Tutors	To evaluate the qualifications, credentials, and teaching experience of the trainers involved in delivering the training, ensuring they meet required standards.
2	Validation of Curriculum	To assess the relevance and alignment of the training curriculum with the officially prescribed syllabus, ensuring it meets industry needs and skill demands.
3	Validation of Training Delivery	To verify that the training was delivered effectively and in accordance with the terms and conditions outlined in the Memorandum of Understanding (MOU).
4	Validation of Training Completion	To confirm that the training was completed as scheduled, including verification of attendance records, total training hours, number of graduates and issuance of completion certificates.
5	Validation of Certification	To examine the institutional affiliation and confirm that the certification process with relevant authorities.
6	Validation of Minimum 40% Employment	To assess post-training employment outcomes by determining whether at least 40% of the graduates secured employment either through self-employment or wage employment.

This validation exercise aims to ensure transparency, accountability, and effectiveness in the implementation of the training programme, while also providing actionable insights for future policy and programmatic improvements.

6	Poultry Hatchery Technician	01 Month	6
	Grand Total		68

Each trade was tailored to address specific skill gaps within the livestock and poultry sub-sectors, promoting both wage and self-employment opportunities. The cumulative training effort reflects a substantial investment in developing the human resource base across rural and peri-urban areas of Sindh.

3. Methodology

A well-defined research methodology is fundamental to the accuracy and reliability of any empirical study. It ensures that the research objectives are met through structured data collection, analysis, and interpretation processes. The quality of findings is intrinsically linked to the robustness of the methodology, including the tools used, the population targeted, and the methods employed to gather and validate data.

The methodology for this study was designed to comprehensively evaluate the implementation and outcomes of the youth skills development training programme initiated by the Livestock Department under the Government of Sindh and supported by the Benazir Bhutto Shaheed Human Resource Research and Development Board (BBSHRRDB). The methodology included qualitative and quantitative data collection from all relevant stakeholders, frequency analysis, and the application of basic statistical methods for interpretation.

The following subsections summarize the key components of the methodology used in the current evaluation:

3.1 Population and Sample Size:

The assessment involved three key categories of stakeholders:

- Master Trainers
- Assistant Trainers
- Trainees

These stakeholders played a direct and vital role in the execution of the training programme, and their input was therefore essential to the study's validity. Typically, determining an appropriate sample size is a critical part of research design to ensure generalizability of findings. However, given the manageable size of the total population and the importance of comprehensive coverage, the study adopted a census approach, incorporating 100% of the population for data collection.

This decision ensured that the data captured reflected the views and experiences of all individuals directly involved in the training programme, enhancing both the depth and reliability of the findings.

3.2 Reliability of Data:

To ensure reliability and consistency in the data, the study employed a full population sampling method. As every individual within the target population was included, concerns typically associated with sampling error and representativeness were effectively mitigated.

The survey collected quantitative responses which were analyzed through frequency distributions and mean values, focusing on the participants' experience during the most recent training cycle. Given the exhaustive nature of data collection, the dataset was considered statistically reliable.

The response rate from each stakeholder group is detailed in the table below:

Stakeholder	Population	Responses Obtained	Response Rate
Master Trainers	22	22	100%
Assistant Trainers	07	07	100%
Trainees	1,390	1,390	100%
Total	1,419	1,419	100%

The 100% response rate across all stakeholder categories demonstrates a high level of engagement and lends strong credibility to the data and subsequent analysis.

3.3 Methodology for Statistical Modelling and Analysis:

To ensure a rigorous evaluation of the training programme, the study employed a mixed-methods approach, combining both quantitative and qualitative research techniques. This enabled comprehensive data triangulation, strengthening the reliability and validity of the findings.

Data collection instruments included:

Structured Questionnaires (for quantitative data collection)

Semi-Structured Interviews (for qualitative insights)

The structured questionnaire was developed based on themes and concerns identified during the literature review, with a focus on participant experience, curriculum content, and training outcomes. The interview schedule was later refined to probe deeper into areas where the questionnaire responses indicated potential gaps or patterns requiring further exploration.

For qualitative analysis, thematic analysis was used to identify recurring patterns, perceptions, and insights from stakeholders. The internal consistency and reliability of the questionnaire instrument were verified using the Cronbach's Alpha method, which demonstrated acceptable levels of reliability.

4. Objective-wise Validation

4.1 Assessment of Master and Assistant Trainers

As part of the validation exercise, a comprehensive assessment of both Master Trainers and Assistant Trainers was conducted to evaluate their qualifications, domain expertise, and effectiveness in delivering the training content.

The assessment process was carried out in two phases:

The following graph depicts the academic status of master and assistant trainers

The total numbers in the light of the survey were 30 master and assistant trainers, which is in accordance with the mandate mentioned in the PFT . The master trainers and assistant trainers were found to be highly qualified and competent in their specialties.

4.3 Assessment of Curriculum Taught

The curriculum represents the foundational framework of any training programme, encompassing course content, learning objectives, instructional strategies, and assessment tools. In the context of this project, it was imperative that the curriculum not only be educationally sound but also aligned with the specific demands of the livestock sector, which is a cornerstone of rural livelihoods and economic development in Sindh.

4.5 Relevance to the Livestock Sector

The curriculum was designed with a clear emphasis on the practical realities and evolving needs of the livestock and poultry industries in Sindh . Given the province's significant dependence on livestock for employment, food security, and rural income generation, the training modules were tailored to equip participants with industry-relevant knowledge and hands-on skills . This includes areas such as animal health, disease control, artificial insemination, vaccination protocols, poultry management, and modern livestock care practices.

Stakeholder interviews and field observations confirmed that the curriculum content directly reflected current field practices and was sufficiently updated to include emerging trends and technologies within the livestock domain. By focusing on locally applicable methods and challenges, the programme ensured that trainees could apply their learning immediately and effectively in their professional settings, whether through employment or self-enterprise.

4.6 Curriculum Design and Structure

Comprehensiveness and Organization:

The curriculum was comprehensive, covering a wide spectrum of technical subjects and soft skills essential for the professional development of trainees. Modules were well-organized, enabling trainees to progressively build their competencies from basic animal handling to advanced techniques in diagnosis, treatment, and farm management.

Theoretical and Practical Integration:

A strong feature of the curriculum was its balanced integration of theoretical instruction with practical application. Practical training was conducted through field visits, live demonstrations, and hands-on practice, ensuring that trainees could translate classroom knowledge into field competence especially critical in the livestock sector where skill execution is as important as conceptual understanding.

Trainer and Trainee Alignment:

Trainers confirmed that the curriculum aligned well with industry expectations and academic standards. Trainees also expressed satisfaction with the curriculum, stating that it enabled them to better understand animal health, breeding techniques, and disease management, which are vital areas in livestock development.

Standardization and Endorsement:

The curriculum was reviewed, standardized, and approved by the Project Management Unit, Benazir Bhutto Shaheed Human Resource Research & Development Board (BBSHRRDB). This endorsement ensured its compliance with provincial training benchmarks and affirmed its legitimacy as a capacity - building tool for youth empowerment in Sindh.

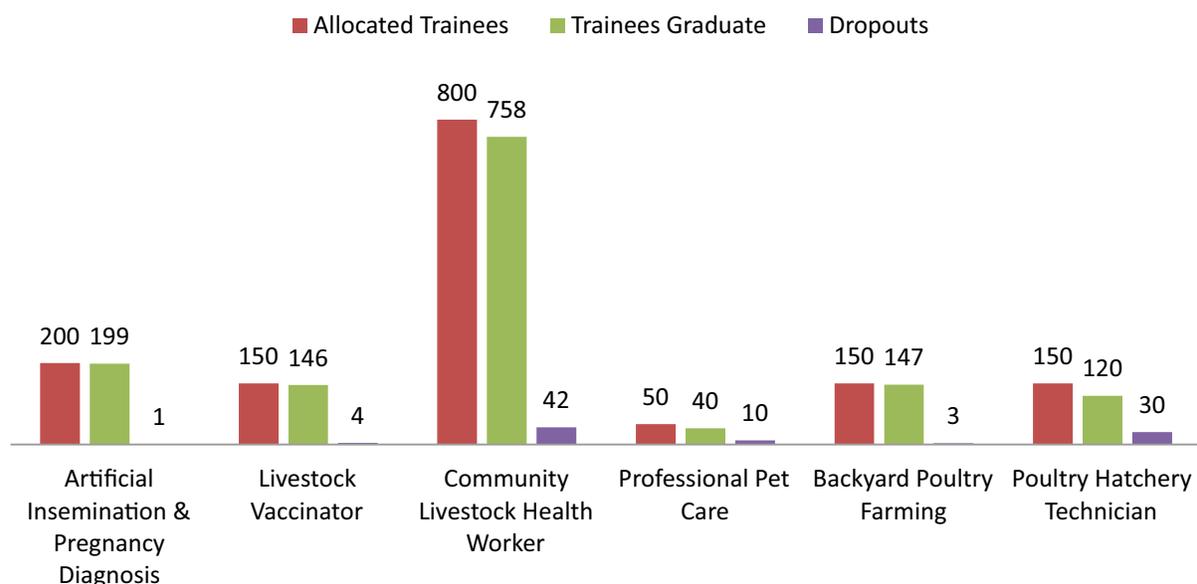

In summary, the curriculum utilized in this training programme was technically sound, practically oriented, and highly relevant to the livestock sector. It addressed both current industry practices and future challenges, preparing trainees to contribute meaningfully to the province's livestock economy. The training has the potential to enhance animal productivity, reduce rural unemployment, and support sustainable agricultural development all of which are aligned with the strategic objectives of the Government of Sindh.

5. Assessment of Training Delivery

The effective delivery of technical and vocational training is crucial to ensuring that the intended learning outcomes are achieved and that trainees are equipped with both theoretical knowledge and practical competencies. As part of the third -party validation, the consultants were tasked with evaluating the quality, duration, and structure of the training delivery, including the accuracy of enrolment data and the timely distribution of training certificates. The details of trade-wise trainings are as follows:

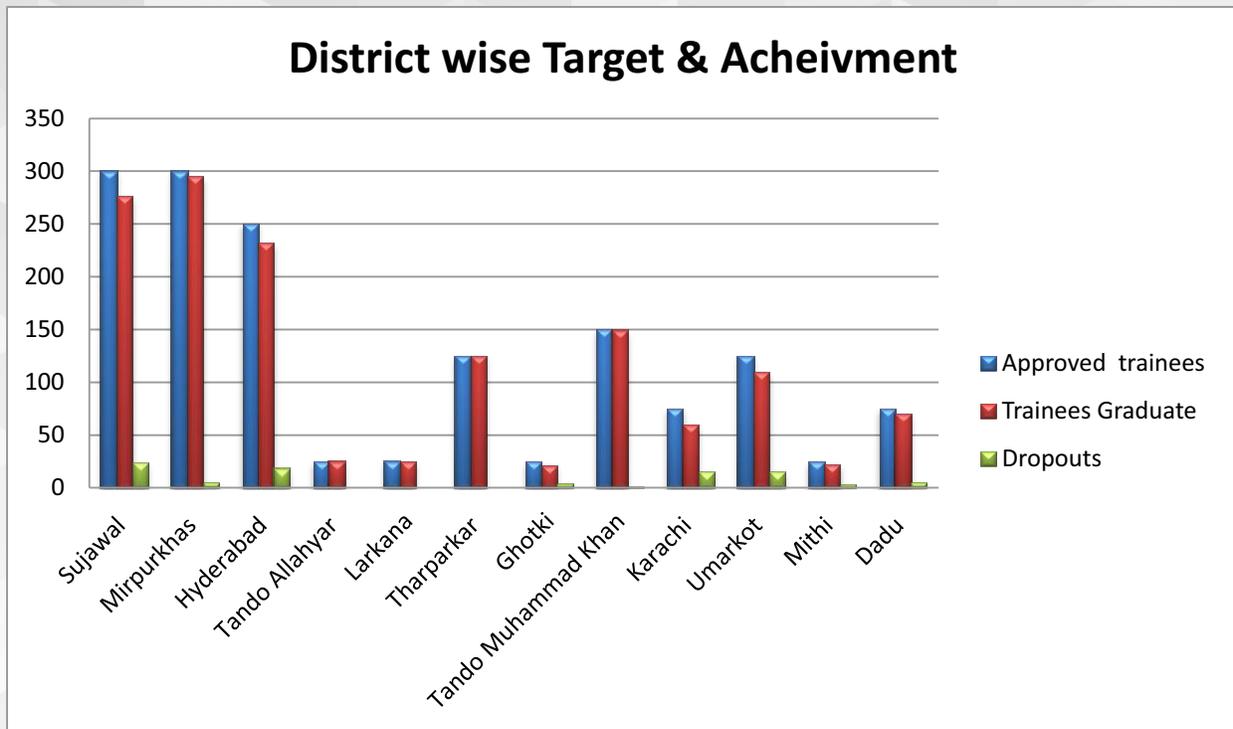

S#	Trade	Allocated Trainees	Trainees Graduate	Dropouts
1	Artificial Insemination & Pregnancy Diagnosis	200	199	1

5.1 Lesson Plans and Instructional Coverage:

Interviews with master and assistant trainers confirmed that lesson plans were adequately prepared and implemented. Trainers indicated that the content delivery was aligned with the curriculum structure and that sufficient time was dedicated to each module. Observations from management and trainees also supported the claim that all planned lessons were delivered effectively, covering essential areas of livestock health, animal handling, breeding techniques, and poultry management.

5.2 Assessment of Trainees:

A structured assessment methodology was followed for evaluating trainees. Trainers utilized predefined evaluation criteria to design tests, quizzes, and practical assessments. These evaluation tools were consistent with the programme's standards, and feedback from trainees indicated that the assessments were fair, relevant, and clearly communicated. The assessment process ensured that only those with demonstrable competencies progressed to certification.

5.3 Guest Lectures and Industry Engagement:

In an effort to expose trainees to real -world insights, guest lectures were organized featuring experts from the livestock department. These sessions were well-received and contributed to a broader understanding of emerging challenges and opportunities within the sector. Trainees reported that such engagements enhanced their learning experience and provided valuable exposure to industry best practices.

6. Assessment of Training Completion

The validation also focused on verifying the training completion metrics, including actual enrolment figures, the number of graduates, the training duration, attendance monitoring, examination procedures, and the timely issuance of certificates.

6.1 Enrolment and Graduation Statistics

The programme enrolled a total of 1,500 candidates across eight specialized trades relevant to livestock, poultry, and animal care. Out of these, 1,444 trainees successfully completed their training and were awarded graduation certificates. The dropout rate was minimal and largely attributed to individual circumstances beyond the control of the programme.

6.2 Training Duration

Each trade had a specific duration ranging from One to Two months, depending on the technical depth and skill level required. The validation confirmed that the training duration adhered strictly to the timeframes outlined by the Benazir Bhutto Shaheed Human Resource Research & Development Board (BBSHRRDB). Trainers, management, and trainees all acknowledged that the full length of training was provided without interruption.

6.3 Attendance Monitoring

Attendance records were carefully maintained throughout the training. The Project Management Unit (PMU) in Hyderabad implemented a rigorous attendance policy, and participation was closely monitored using structured registers and attendance logs. A high attendance rate was observed, demonstrating the commitment of trainees and the effectiveness of monitoring mechanisms.

6.4 Examinations

Final assessments were conducted according to the training schedule, with examinations encompassing both theoretical and practical components. The examinations reflected the competencies outlined in the curriculum, particularly in areas such as disease diagnosis, livestock vaccination, artificial insemination techniques, and poultry hatchery management. Trainees agreed that the exams were fair and representative of their training.

6.5 Certificate Distribution

All successful trainees received official training completion certificates in a timely manner, in line with programme protocols. Certification data was cross-checked and verified using official training records maintained by the PMU. The distribution of certificates signifies the formal recognition of the skills acquired and enhances the employability of graduates in the livestock sector.

6.6 Progressive Gender Inclusion:

The program succeeded in promoting gender inclusion, with a notable number of female participants engaged in trades traditionally dominated by men. This marks an important step toward gender mainstreaming in the Livestock sector and contributes to the broader goal of women's economic empowerment in rural Sindh.

7. Assessment of Validation of Certification

Certification is a key outcome of any technical training initiative, signifying the formal recognition of skills and competencies acquired. During the validation exercise, the consultants verified the accreditation and institutional affiliation of the program with the Benazir Bhutto Shaheed Human Resource Research & Development Board (BBSHRRDB).

Feedback from project management, master trainers, assistant trainers, and trainees consistently affirmed that all training certificates were issued under the auspices of BBSHRRDB and were fully compliant with their prescribed standards and format. This affiliation enhances the credibility and recognition of the certification among public and private stakeholders, particularly within the livestock and animal husbandry sectors where such qualifications directly influence employment potential and professional trust.

Moreover, the trainers highlighted that the certification process was transparent and merit-based, linked closely with the successful completion of theoretical knowledge and practical assessments in trades such as livestock vaccination, artificial insemination, poultry hatchery operations, and backyard poultry farming.

7.1 Validation of Employment

Employment generation remains the most significant indicator of a skill development program success. In the context of this training initiative, employment outcomes were assessed both in terms of wage employment and self-employment, particularly within the livestock, poultry, and veterinary service sectors.

A majority of trainees confirmed receiving the support from PMU-BBSHRRDB, indicating that the program extended its scope beyond technical training to include essential career readiness components. This is especially important for trades such as community livestock health workers, livestock vaccinators and Artificial Insemination & Pregnancy Diagnosis where engagement with rural communities and livestock farms is essential for job placement.

7.2 Current Employment Status of Graduated Trainees:

The consultants analyzed the employment status of all 1,444 graduated trainees. The findings are as follows:

547 trainees (38.25%) are currently employed in full-time positions. These roles include employment at veterinary clinics, poultry farms, livestock extension services, and private agricultural enterprises.

76 trainees (5.29%) reported being self-employed. These individuals have established micro-enterprises such as mobile veterinary services, backyard poultry setups, and livestock feed supply services.

812 trainees (56.46%) are not yet employed but are actively seeking job opportunities.

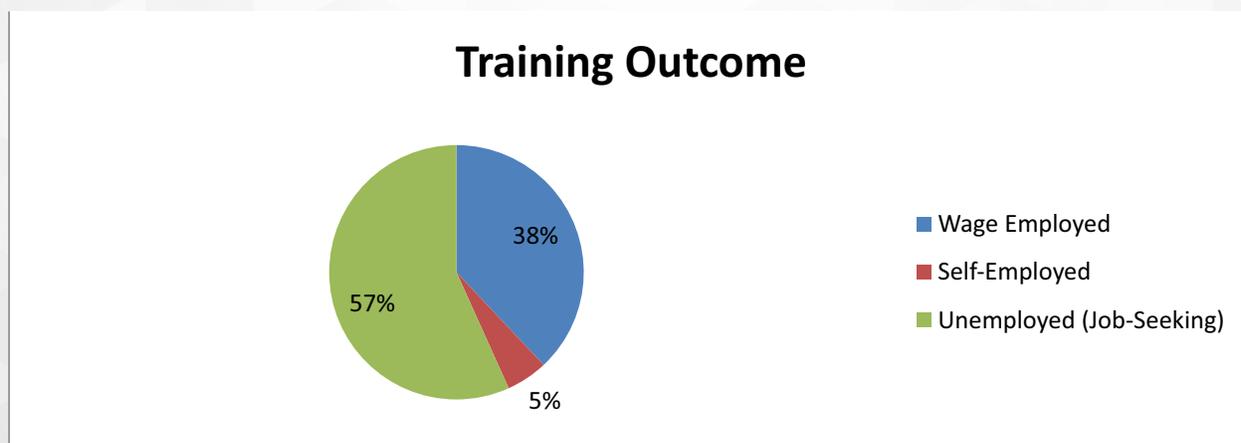

This brings the total employed (wage and self-employment) to 623 trainees, or 43.54% of the total graduates. This figure is particularly encouraging in the context of the rural and semi-urban settings where livestock plays a critical role in livelihood sustenance.

Table: Trainee Employment Status

S. No.	Employment Status	No. of Trainees	Percentage
1	Wage Employed	547	38.25%
2	Self-Employed	76	5.29%
3	Unemployed (Job-Seeking)	812	56.46%
Total		1,435	100%

These outcomes demonstrate that the training program has made significant strides in contributing to employment generation and entrepreneurship development within the livestock sector, directly supporting the Government of Sindh's broader agenda of rural economic upliftment and youth empowerment.

The graph below depicts the aforementioned data:

Trade-wise Distribution of Employed Graduates:

8. Suggestions and Recommendations

The Benazir Bhutto Shaheed Human Resource Research & Development Board (BBSHRADB), under the Government of Sindh, continues to play a pivotal role in youth skill development through vocational and technical training initiatives. In light of the findings from this third-party validation, the following recommendations are presented to further enhance the effectiveness, transparency, and outreach of the program:

8.1. Authenticity and Verification of Trainees

All trainees included in the programme were verified through telephonic communication and in-person interviews. No fictitious trainees were identified, indicating a high degree of authenticity and transparent enrollment practices. This system of verification should continue to be upheld and strengthened in future training cycles.

8.2. Capacity Building of Stakeholders

It is essential to further strengthen the capacity of all stakeholders including administrative staff, trainers, and management to improve both the quality and quantity of training delivery. Any minor administrative lapse could result in the exclusion of underprivileged candidates. Enhanced coordination and professional development for staff will mitigate such risks and promote equitable access.

8.3. Standardization of Training Components

The program currently faces challenges in maintaining uniformity across its diverse trades and geographical locations. To address this:

Standardized training durations, stipend/payment structures, and comprehension of standard operating procedures (SOPs) must be strictly enforced.

All partner institutions should adhere to a uniform curriculum framework and assessment model to ensure consistency in outcomes across districts.

8.4. Promotion of Success Stories

Need-based training success stories should be published in local newspapers, magazines, and online platforms to inspire other youth and increase awareness.

Highlighting beneficiaries from marginalized communities will strengthen the program visibility and social impact.

8.5. Support for Incomplete Documentation

Many deserving trainees are unable to benefit from scholarships due to missing or incomplete documentation. A support system possibly through district-level facilitation desks or online guidance should be developed to assist these individuals in fulfilling documentation requirements.

8.6. Widening the Dissemination of Program Information

Currently, information about training and scholarships is largely limited to already-enrolled candidates. It is imperative to reach a wider audience, particularly those unable to enroll due to lack of awareness. Recommended channels for broader outreach include:

- Print and electronic media
- Social media platforms
- SMS marketing
- Community outreach campaigns

8.7. Equitable District-Level Scholarship Allocation

The current scholarship allocation mechanism based on population size does not always reflect actual socio-economic need, especially in remote or underdeveloped areas. A need-sensitive allocation model should be adopted to ensure that trainees from less privileged backgrounds and remote districts receive proportionate support.
